people could afford to purchase even in good times.

The thankfulness of the poor people who have been relieved out of that first $1,000 is expressed in letters full of tender pathos. They come from the heart. Here are a few samples:

send along your cast-off clothing. Every article will be useful to some one. Especially desirable is clothing for children, and particularly footnear.

Don't write letters to "The Evening world" asking the paper to send some one after clothing to send on the bundle yourself to Room El Pulitzer Building.

Anything in the way of wearing arparel is a rich prize to these poor creatures, for, to begin with, the material is usually of a kind far superior to anything the receivers have been used to, and when half-worm out, the article is still far better than the best that poor good times.
